

Put Me In, Coach

Employee Edition

Course Overview

Put Me In, Coach: Employee Edition was created to help participants take control of their careers.

As is the case with the success of sports teams, success in one's career is dependent upon a variety of similar factors – a company's culture, leadership and its financial as well as operational performance.

In this course, we will focus on what's under an employee's control personally and professionally. Participants will leave the session with additional tools and resources to "win the game".

By the end of the course, participants will be able to:

Articulate and utilize their professional network for career development

Create both a short-term and long-range plan for the future

Identify someone who can support their ongoing development

Pinpoint strengths and "blind spots" related to their communication and decision-making styles

Manage progress in reaching developmental goals

Determine ways to make development a priority

As part of this experience, participants receive specific feedback on their personality and are provided with both a model and action plan for personal and professional development.

Contact us at info@lc-consultants.com to learn more about how to implement this solution in your organization. We can also highlight the numerous customization options available to you.

